▲ [On the fringes of the Palmeraie in Marrakech, lies the boutique Lodge K. Hidden behind high stone walls, there's a timeless mystique that surrounds this peaceful oasis]

You step into gardens lush with olive trees, royal palms, cacti, coconut and bamboo trees. The pathway leads to a circular swimming pool in the middle of which sits a tropical islet

Beyond are the five luxurious Lodges and three Suites, full of Arabian character and featuring all the mod-cons, including a Jacuzzi.

The lobby reception is cosy with lanterns, soft colourful sofas, cushions and an open fire in the corner. In the evenings, the area transforms into a dining space that goes out onto the colonial-style terrace.

Days here are spent languishing on deep wicker sun loungers with a good book; relaxing in the Spa with treatments and products, and walking in the shady gardens. If you need to stretch your limbs, a personal coach can draw you up a running schedule or a mountainbike trail, and there's a sauna and hammam to enjoy afterwards.

Lunch is served by the pool or in-room, and in the evenings, in the lobby, on the terrace by the pool or under the Berber canopy. The cuisine is delicate top-notch gastronomy: traditional Moroccan dishes of salads, grilled meats, couscous and tajines, cooked on the wood stove and available around the clock.

If you long for a taste of the exotic and need to escape from the hustle and bustle, Lodge K is an attractive proposition.
